SECTION I: GENERAL WORKS

Billard, Jules B., editor. The World of the American Indian. Washington, D.C.: National Geographic Society, 1974.

A non-technical introduction that includes a chapter on North American archeology and one on Eastern Indians.

Brennan, Louis A. Artifacts of Prehistoric America. Harrisburg, PA: Stackpole Books, 1975.

An excellent description of artifacts, including identifications and illustrations of stone tools. Very useful for the beginner, although it does not include a section on the D.C. area.

Brennan, Louis A. Beginner's Guide to Archeology. Harrisburg, Pa.: Stackpole Books, 1973.

A basic guide to archeology, well suited to beginners. Gives background on archeological techniques including classification and description of major artifact types. Includes a guide to museums and sites open to the public.

Chambers, Mary E. and Robert L. Humphrey. Ancient Washington--American Indian Cultures of the Potomac Valley. G. W. Washington Studies, No. 6. Washington, D.C.: George Washington University, 1977. Available for $3.00 from The Division of Experimental Programs, George Washington University, Washington, D.C. 20052.

A brief over-view of the American Indian cultures of the Potomac Valley from the PaleoIndian to Woodland periods. Well written and readily understood.

Griffin, James B. "Eastern North American Prehistory: A Summary." Science 156 (1967):175-191.

A summary of recent archeological research and interpretations of Eastern North American prehistory.

Griffin, James B., editor. Archeology of Eastern United States. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1952.

A major comprehensive reference with a useful regional chronology and site inventory as of 1951. Excellent background material for artifact identification. Although this work does not concentrate on the Potomac Valley, it provides useful background material for this area.

Holmes, William H. "Stone Implements of the Potomac-Chesapeake Tidewater Province." Smithsonian Institution, Bureau of American Ethnology, 15th Annual Report, pp. 3-152. Washington, D.C., 1897.

An early, comprehensive scientific study of the archeology and prehistory of the Potomac Valley based on an analysis of stone tools. Discusses quarry methods, uses of raw materials, methods of tool manufacture, and classification of tool types. A basic reference to local archeology, however, the dates, sequence, and much else are entirely out-of-date.

Hodge, Frederick W., editor. Handbook of American Indians North of Mexico, vol. 1&2. Reprinted by Pageant Books, Inc., New York, 1959. (Originally published as Bulletin 30 of the Smithsonian Institution, Bureau of American Ethnology, 1907-1910.)

An encyclopedic treatment of the subject, organized alphabetically. Most topical articles are now out-of-date, but articles under tribal and personal names are still very useful. Valuable synonymy of tribal names at the end.

Murdock, George P., and O'Leary, Timothy. Ethnographic Bibliography of North America. 4th ed. 5 vols. Vol. 4: Eastern United States. Behavior Science Bibliographies. New Haven, CT: Human Relations Area Files, 1975.

This work, organized by geographic area and tribal groups, offers a nearly complete listing of serious published accounts of Native American cultures up to 1975. No annotations nor topical indexes but does contain a tribal map.

Porter, Frank W. III. In Pursuit of the Past: An Anthropological and Bibliographic Guide to Maryland and Delaware. Native American Bibliography Series, No. 8. Metuchen, NJ: The Scarecrow Press, Inc., 1986.

Chapter headings include: The First Century: An Overview, Salvaging the Past, The Beginnings of an Organized Survey of Potomac River Village Sites, The Search for Indian Survivals, An Assessment, and Bibliography.

Swanton, John R. The Indians of the Southeastern United States. Reprinted by Smithsonian Institution Press, 1979. (Originally published as Bulletin 137 of the Smithsonian Institution, Bureau of American Ethnology, 1946.)

A summary of what is known of the historic cultures, arranged topically. See Powhatan, Pamlico (in index), and other tribes as shown on book's map.

Swanton, John R. The Indian Tribes of North America. Reprinted by Smithsonian Institution Press, 1974, 1979. (Originally published as Bulletin 145 of the Smithsonian Institution, Bureau of American Ethnology, 1952.)

An alphabetic compilation of native tribal groups by states with short descriptive summaries of each tribe.

Underhill, Ruth M. Red Man's America. 2nd ed. Chicago: University of Chicago Press, 1971. (First published in 1953.)

A general introduction to Native Americans organized by culture areas with a good chapter on the Eastern Algonquians.

Wiley, Gordon. Introduction to American Archaeology. Volume One: North and Middle America. Englewood Cliffs, NJ: Prentice-Hall, Inc., 1966.

A good introductory text covering the archeology of North and Middle America. Organized by geographic area and cultural traditions.

SECTION II: HISTORICAL STUDIES

Axtell, James. The European and the Indian: Essays in the Ethnohistory of Colonial North America. Oxford University Press, 1981.

Barbour, Philip L. The Three Worlds of Captain John Smith. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Co., 1964.

A biography of Captain John Smith as an adventurer, a colonist, and a promotor. This work provides an understanding of the foundations of Indian-White relations in the Virginia-Maryland Tidewater.

Barbour, Phillip L., editor. The Jamestown Voyages Under the First Charter, 1606-1609. 2 vols. Works issued by the Hakluyt Society, 2nd series nos. 136-137. Cambridge, England, 1969.

Contemporary documents, with much information on Indians. Well indexed.

Barbour, Phillip L. Pocahontas and her World. Boston: Houghton Mifflin Co., 1970.

The best biography on Pocahontas; it cites sources and includes a bibliography.

Berry, Brewton. Almost White. New York: Macmillan, 1963.

Describes non-reservation Indians of the East, 1930s - 1950s.

Beverly, Robert. The History and Present State of Virginia. Edited by Louis B. Wright. Chapel Hill: Univ. of North Carolina Press, 1947.

A reprint of work first published in 1705, containing first-hand information on Virginia Indians.

Burnaby, Andrew. "Travels Through the Middle Settlements in North America in the Years 1759 and 1760." In Voyages and Travels, vol. 13, pp. 701-752. Edited by John Pinkerton. London: Longman, Hurst, Rees & Orme, 1808-1814.

Bushnell, David I., Jr. "Virginia Before Jamestown." Smithsonian Miscellaneous Collections 100:125-158. Washington, D.C., 1940.

Organized for scientific study but written for both a scientific and general audience. Study of prehistoric lifeways in Virginia prior to the colonial period.

Clayton, John. "John Clayton's 1687 Account of the Medicinal Practices of the Virginia Indians." Explanatory notes by Bernard Hoffman. Ethnohistory 11:1-40.

_____. "Another 'Account of Virginia'" [1687]. Virginia Magazine of History and Biography 76:432-436.

_____. The Reverend John Clayton [1687]. Edited by Edmund and Dorothy S. Berkeley. Charlottesville: University of Virginia Press, 1965.

_____. "The Indians of Virginia" [1689]. William and Mary Quarterly, 3rd series, 16:228-243.

Clayton's authorship of this account is uncertain.

Craven, Wesley Frank. White, Red, and Black: The Seventeenth Century Virginian. Charlottesville: The University Press of Virginia, 1971.

Divided into three sections--White, Red, and Black--the author explores who were the early English colonists in America, the colonists relationship with the Indian inhabitants of Virginia, and Negro enslavement during the early colonial period. Based on a series of lectures.

Craven, Wesley Frank. "Indian Policy in Early Virginia." William and Mary Quarterly, 3rd series, 1:65-82.

Durand de Dauphine. A Huguenot Exile in Virginia; or Voyages of a Frenchman exiled for his Religion with a description of Virginia and Maryland [1687]. New York: The Press of the Pioneers, Inc., 1934.

Ewan, Joseph and Ewan, Nesta. John Banister and his Natural History of Virginia, 1678-1692. Urbana: Univ. of Illinois Press, 1970.

Includes first-hand information on Virginia Indians, especially uses of plants.

Feest, Christian F. "Seventeenth Century Virginia Algonquian Population Estimates." Quarterly Bulletin of the Archeological Society of Virginia. 28(2) (1973):66-79.

An examination of the major problems involved in estimating 17th century Virginia Indian population. Feest examines sources on two test cases-- the Powhatan and the Kecoughtan--to re-evaluate the reliability of the population estimates given by John Smith (1612-1624) and William Strachey (1612).

_____. "The Virginia Indian in Pictures, 1612-1624." The Smithsonian Journal of History 2(1), 1967.

Fundaburk, Emma Lila. Southeastern Indians, Life Portraits: A Catalogue of Pictures 1564-1860. Metuchen, N.J.: Scarecrow Press, 1969. (Originally published in 1958.)

Reproduces nearly all the known early pictures of Carolina and Virginia Indians.

Harriot, Thomas. A Briefe and True Report of the New Found Land of Virginia. The Complete 1590 Theodor de Bry edition. New York: Dover Publications, Inc., 1972.

A republication of DeBry's 1590 edition of Harriot's 16th century description of the "Virginia" Indians (ex. Indians of what is now coastal North Carolina.) May be difficult to understand the archaic language but well worth the effort. Includes reprints of the famous engravings by DeBry after John White (see Hulton and Quinn, 1964)

Hening, William Waller, compiler. The Statutes at Large of Virginia [1809-1823]. 13 vols. New York: R. & W. & G. Bartow.

A primary source for information on government policy toward Indians and Indian treaties.

Hulton, Paul, editor. America Fifteen Eighty-Five: The Complete Drawings of John White. Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1984.

Contains the same illustrations as the older work listed below, but with less text.

Hulton, Paul and David Beers Quinn. The American Drawings of John White, 1577-1590. 2 vols. London: Trustees of the British Museum, and Chapel Hill: University of North Carolina Press, 1964.

Fine reproductions of the watercolors and the derivative engravings of coastal North Carolina Indians with critical annotations and commentaries. These drawings are the main source for the appearance of the similar Virginia Indians. Now a rare book but available in large libraries.

Jennings, Francis. The Invasion of America: Indians, Colonialism and the Cant of Conquest. Raleigh: University of North Carolina Press, 1975.

Kingsbury, Susan Myra, compiler. The Records of the Virginia Company of London. 4 vols. Washington, DC: Library of Congress, 1809-1823.

A source of information on the government policy toward Indians.

Kupperman, Karen. Settling with the Indians: The Meeting of English and Indian Cultures in America, 1580-1640. Rowman and Littlefield, 1980.

A comparison of cultures and attitudes of the English and of the Indians during the first sixty years of English colonization in North America. No illustrations.

Marye, William B. "The Wicomiss Indians of Maryland." American Antiquity 4 (1938):146-52.

An account of the little-known Wicomiss Indians of Maryland's upper Eastern Shore and their relations with the English in the 17th century.

- _____. "Indian Paths of the Delmarva Peninsula." Bulletin of the Archaeological Society of Delaware 2(15):1-25, 1937.

Holmes, William H. "Aboriginal Pottery of the Eastern United States." Smithsonian Institution, Bureau of American Ethnology, 20th Annual Report, pp. 1-237. Washington, D.C., 1903.

This early scientific study of prehistoric ceramics continues to be a major reference, although local typologies and sequences have been substantially improved (see Evans, 1955).

Holmes, William H. "Prehistoric Textile Art of the Eastern United States." Smithsonian Institution, Bureau of American Ethnology, 13th Annual Report, pp. 3-46, Washington, D.C., 1895.

A scientific study of prehistoric textiles, basketry, and fiber constructions, including weirs and traps, with a focus primarily on the Southeastern United States. Now entirely out-of-date insofar as typology and sequences are concerned.

Holmes, William H. "Aboriginal Shell-Heaps of the Middle Atlantic Tidewater Region." American Anthropologist, N.S., 9(1):113-128, 1907.

Report of excavations of middle Atlantic shell middens, with particular reference to the Pope's Creek Site in Maryland. Includes a description of both stone tools and pottery sherds. Typology and chronology are entirely out-of-date.

Kenny, Hamill T. The Origin and Meaning of the Indian Place Names of Maryland. Baltimore: Waverly Press, 1961.

Manakee, Harold R. Indians of Early Maryland. Baltimore: Maryland Historical Society, 1959.

A children's book on Maryland Indians. Covers basic aspects of Indian life based on historical references.

Mooney, James. "The Powhatan Confederacy, Past and Present." American Anthropologist, N.S., 9:129-152, 1907.
A study of the Powhatan Confederacy, with particular reference to population size, location of tribal units, and history of the native Indians of Tidewater Virginia. Now substantially out-of-date.

Porter III, Frank W. "The Nanticoke Indians in a Hostile World." In Strategies for Survival: American Indians in the Eastern United States, pp. 139-172. Edited by Frank W. Porter III. Westport, CT: Greenwood Press, 1986.

Explores how the Nanticoke Indians of Maryland and Delaware were able to survive and maintain their Indian identity, which included living in a marginal environment to prevent continued encroachment of their land by Whites and reduce contact between the two cultures.

Porter, Frank W., compiler. Indians in Maryland and Delaware: A Critical Bibliography. Bloomington, IN: Indiana University Press, 1980.

This 128 page bibliography, including a map, is available in paperback.

Potter, Stephen R. Commoners, Tribute and Chiefs: The Development of Algonquian Culture in the Potomac Valley. Charlottesville, VA: University Press of Virginia, 1993.

Traces the rise of the Chickacoans from A.D. 200 to the early 17th century.

Sturtevant, William C., general editor. Handbook of North American Indians Volume 15: Northeast. Bruce G. Trigger, volume editor. Washington, D.C.: Smithsonian Institution, 1978.

A summary of the scholarly knowledge of the tribal histories and cultures of the Indians of the northeastern U.S. and southeastern Canada from the earliest prehistoric times to the present. Each chapter includes maps, illustrations, and references to other sources of information. The archeology is covered in five chapters:

"Prehistory: Introduction" by James E. Fitting, pp. 14-15

"Post-Pleistocene Adaptations" by Robert E. Funk, pp. 16-27

"Regional Cultural Development, 3000 to 300 B.C." by James A. Tuck, pp. 28-43

"Regional Cultural Development, 300 B.C. to A.D. 1000" by James E. Fitting, pp. 44-57

"Late Prehistory of the East Coast" by Dean R. Snow, pp. 58-69

The cultures and history of the tribes of the Virginia-District of Columbia-Maryland coastal region and nearby tribes are covered in six chapters:

"Virginia Algonquians" by Christian F. Feest, pp. 253-270

"Nanticoke and Neighboring Tribes" by Christian F. Feest, pp. 240-252

"North Carolina Algonquians" by Christian F. Feest, pp. 271-281

"Iroquoian Tribes of the Virginia - North Carolina Coastal Plain" by Douglas W. Boyce, pp. 282-289

"Delaware" by Ives Goddard, pp. 213-239

"Marginal Groups" by Brewton Berry, pp. 290-295

Related topics are:

"Eastern Algonquian Languages" by Ives Goddard, pp. 70-77

An analytical study of archeological sites and pottery sequences from the Middle Chesapeake region.

SECTION IV: SITE STUDIES

Benthall, Joseph L. Archeological Investigation of the Shannon Site, Montgomery County, Virginia. (Virginia State Library Publication, no. 32.) Richmond, VA: The Virginia State Library, 1969.

A report of the first archeological site investigated in this area of Virginia. Artifacts and archeological features of the site, such as storage pits, refuse pits, hearths, and graves, reveal repeated occupation during the Archaic Period, followed by an intensive Late Prehistoric occupation from A.D. 1500-1600 of a large palisaded village. Ceramic types suggest possible Siouan influence or occupation.

Bushnell, David I., Jr. "Evidence of Early Indian Occupancy Near the Peaks of Otter, Bedford County, Virginia," Smithsonian Miscellaneous Collections 99(15):1-4. Washington, D.C., 1940.

Scientific report of the Mons Site and of related occupations near Peaks of Otter. Includes a description of artifacts and photographs.

Bushnell, David I., Jr. "Indian Sites Below the Falls of the Rappahannock, Virginia." Smithsonian Miscellaneous Collections 96(4):1-65. Washington, D.C., 1937.

An historical account that establishes, from surface collections, the existence of several distinct periods of habitation in the valley of the Rappahannock, preceeding occupation by historic tribes.

Davidson, Thomas E. "Historically Attested Indian Villages of the Lower Delmarva." Maryland Archaeology 18(1):108, 1982.

Describes Indian villages on the lower Eastern Shore of Maryland that can be located on the basis of historical documents.

Davidson, T. E. and Hughes, Richard. "Aerial Photography and the Search for Chicone Indian Town." Archaeology 39(4):58-76, 1986.

Using aerial photography to locate Indian village sites in Maryland's Eastern Shore.

Gardner, William M., editor. The Flint Run Paleo-Indian Complex, A Preliminary Report, 1971-1973 Seasons. Occasional Publication No. 1, Archeology Laboratory, Department of Anthropology, Catholic University of America. Washington, D.C., 1974.

The Flint Run Complex includes the Thunderbird Site, a major Eastern PaleoIndian site. The report details excavations, analysis of artifacts, and results of environmental studies to 1973.

Holland, C.G. An Archeological Survey of Southwest Virginia. (Smithsonian Contributions to Anthropology, no. 12.) Washington, D.C., 1970.

A summary report of an archeological survey in Southwestern Virginia, which includes site inventory, artifact analysis, maps, and photographs. The report develops the thesis that Southwestern Virginia was a cultural cross-roads reflecting influences from a wide area.

Justice, Noel D. Stone Age Spear and Arrow Points of the Midcontinental and Eastern United States: A Modern Survey and Reference. Bloomington: Indiana University Press, 1987.

Well illustrated and written for the general public.

Kent, Barry C., Smith, Ira F., III, and McCann, Catherine, editors. Foundations of Pennsylvania Prehistory. Harrisburg: The Pennsylvania Historical and Museum Commission, 1971.

A summary of Early and Middle Woodland period sites that includes a chapter on the Accokeek Creek Site, Potomac Valley, pp. 241-261, by Robert L. Stephenson.

Marye, William B. "Former Indian Sites in Maryland as Located by Early Colonial Records." American Antiquity 2 (1936):40-46.

Describes contact period Indian sites that are mentioned in early written documents.

Schmitt, Karl, Jr. "Patawomeke: An Historic Algonkian Site." Quarterly Bulletin, Archeological Society of Virginia 20(1):1-36, September 1965.

An archeological/historical investigation of Patawomeke, a fortified Powhatan village in Stafford County, Virginia, visited by Capt. John Smith in 1608.

Stephenson, Robert L. and Ferguson, Alice L. L., with sections by Henry G. Ferguson. The Accokeek Creek Site, A Middle Atlantic Seaboard Culture Sequence. (Anthropological Papers, University of Michigan, No. 20.), 1963.

A detailed comparative analysis of artifacts from a site across the river from Mt. Vernon, Virginia, with interesting chapters on historical background and cultural context. The site was unusually large, occupied over a long time span (pre-500 B.C. to post-A.D. 1700), and extensively excavated, allowing Stephenson to propose a Middle Atlantic Seaboard Culture Province as a distinct conceptual unit.

Ubelaker, Douglas H. Reconstruction of Demographic Profiles from Ossuary Skeletal Samples--A Case Study from the Tidewater Potomac. (Smithsonian Contributions to Anthropology, No. 18.) Washington, D.C., 1974.

An excellent technical study of human skeletal material from group re-burial pits, or ossuaries. Describes methods of osteological analysis and models for reconstructing the size, composition, and health of prehistoric populations.

This bibliography was compiled with the assistance of Dr. Helen Rountree (Old Dominion University), Dr. Stephen Potter (Regional Archeologist, National Park Service) and Dr. Tom Davidson (Chief Curator, Jamestown/Yorktown Foundation).
